Completes Fourth Year of Insuring Bank Deposits

Uniform Regulations for Insured Banks as Means of Curtailing Insolvency

Completing its fourth year of insuring bank deposits, the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation has announced its forthcoming annual report to Congress would emphasize the need for medium standard operating requirements for all insured banks.

Basing its suggestions on unprecedented surveys of banking institutions, the Corporation will stress the importance of fixing uniform regulations for insured banks as a means of curtailing insolvency hazards.

Minimum standard requirements contemplated by the Corporation would be intended as a bulwark for state banking rather than as an instrument for control of state banks by a government institution, Chairman Leo T. Crowley declared.

Since January 1, 1934, when the Corporation began functioning, 166 insolvent insured banks have been placed in receivership or merged with the aid of loans by the Corporation, Chairman Crowley pointed out. The 259,000 depositors in these banks whose deposits totaled $68,012,000, were protected to the extent of $64,467,000, or more than 90 percent of their claims, by insurance, pledges by the Corporation. All but 595, or less than one-half of one percent of the depositors were fully protected against loss, the chairman said.

Minimum standard requirements for all insured banks would give depositors even greater protection, Chairman Crowley stated. He said:

"No one can challenge the statement that Federal deposits insurance has saved many depositors from ruin. Our record is such that today 13,876 banks out of 16,454 are insured.

"Nor can anyone properly question the assertion that since the inception of deposit insurance communities have recovered more promptly from the shock caused by

Statewide Program For the President's Birthday Jan. 29th

Celebration May Take the Form of Any Normal, Healthy Recreation

Announcement of a statewide program for celebrating the President's birthday, January 29, is made by Dr. Felix J. Underwood, state chairman of the Birthday Ball committee and the new National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

Stating that the celebration may take the form of any normal, healthy recreation, the health officer says that it will be possible for every man, woman, and child in the state to participate. In local communities throughout the state will be held various forms of entertainment such as basketball games, box suppers, outdoor sports, spelling bees, church festivals, community sings, barbecues, card games, and many others to raise funds for the fight against infantile paralysis.

The objectives of the National Foundation are four-fold: scientific research, directed toward finding a preventive such as used against diphtheria; epidemic first aid to bring immediate facilities in prevention and treatment to the stricken community; proper care, disseminating to doctors and others new knowledge which may prevent deformity; financial aid to local orthopedic centers, hospitals, and clinics.

Dr. Underwood released a portion of President Roosevelt's statement announcing a new National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis.

"My own personal experience," the President said, "in the work that we have been doing at the Georgia Warm Springs Foundation for over ten years, leads me to the very definite conclusion that the best results in attempting to eradicate this disease cannot be secured by approaching the problem through any single one of its aspects, whether that be preventive studies in the laboratory, emergency work during epidemics, or after treatment. For over ten years at the Foundation at Warm Springs, Georgia, we have devoted our efforts almost entirely to the study of improved treatment of the after-effects of the illness. During these years other agencies, which have from time to time assisted, have devoted their energies to other phases of the fight.

"I firmly believe," the President continued, "that the time has arrived when the whole attack on this plague should be led and directed, though not controlled by one national body. And it is for this purpse that a new National Foundation for Infantile Paralysis is being created."

TIME MARCHES ON

(By W. E. Boushe)

Years roll on and pass forever. Nothing in the world can last. Today an OLD, OLD man robed in white, his beard long and flowing, hoary with the frost of time, on his arm suspended a scythe, stands upon our threshold. He is age old for he is time itself. With the one hand he points an old man to the open door and darkness. The old man he points out is ragged and bent, his step is slow and tired, his countenance seared, he has been the creature of many trials, for upon his stooping shoulders he has carried a load far from being all a load of joy and happiness. That burden has been wars and rumors of war, labor troubles, and strikes, unprofitable harvests, Discontent and discord in government affairs, and to top the great burden, sits the spector of John L. Lewis, riding high, wide and handsome. 'Tis the shade of 1937. While, with the other hand, Father Time beckons into the door a young and lusty, babe, all smiles and happiness. He has rosy cheeks and shining eyes. He carries no burden save Pandora's box containing hope. The happy youngster is the spirit of 1938 about to begin his journey. I, myself while not so old as some of my friends, have rounded the pylon many times with Father Time, have seen many radical changes take place, have seen ourselves by science changed more in 50 years than in previous 1,000 years, but as to whether those scientific gadgets have added to the hapiness of mankind each must draw his own conclusions.

In enumerating the following we go back to horse and buggy days. I was born in the closing days of President Rutherford B. Hays administration. The Southern people did not like him on account of fraudulent methods of obtaining his election. Though he was a friend of the South and removed the Northern soldiers from our midst, it was in his administration that labor unions were first organized and nation-wide strikes begun, and which through their lawlessness and corruption made possible the election of Grover Cleveland the first Democrat since the civil war, one of the best and strongest men to ever grace the White House. NOR are those lacking who call Cleveland the last Democrat, refusing to call the New Deal Democratic. The first President I dimly remember was James A. Garfield, who was assassinated. He was succeeded by Chester A. Arthur. Then Grover Cleveland the Democrat. I was then six years of age. There was great rejoicing over the South. News traveled slowly then. We did not hear the good news until probably 10 days after the election. There were bonfires and parades. The little brass cannon now in the park boomed many, many times. We could hear it out home though eight miles away. Every time the cannon would shoot we would all shout for joy, though I did not know what 'twas all about and every time the cannon would boom my mother would shoot her old Smith and Wesson pistol. The women hugged each other and many wept for joy. The negroes were scared and worried. They did not know what the future held for them under Democracy. But—back to the beginning, "in those days, the horse and buggy days." There were no paved roads, no automobiles, no telephones, no mail delivery, no radios, no airships, no waterworks, no moving pictures, no coummunity hospitals, no electric lights. Debts were few and small, sleep was sound. A man who owed upon his home was looked down on. We did not get nearly so much mail in those days and in the country certainly no daily papers for we went at least a week and some time longer without getting mail. There were no artificial swimming pools, but Oh, the joy of the old swim hole in the ditch. The barbers were all negroes.

But now the other side, whereby we can draw our deduction of comparative happiness, of then and now. People largely lived at home dependent upon their own resources. The church was the center of community life the percentage of those who professed Christianity was much greater than now. A preacher was looked on by all with veneration, almost awe. Women did not drink, few used tobacco in any form, family prayers were held, the small children prayed at mother's knee, hymns were the principle songs sung. The negroes sang at their work, where as now they are silent. As I said there were no waterworks, but on the other hand there were no plumbers bills, no frozen pipes, and there never was hydrant water half so cool and refreshing as the water from the old oaken bucket. The old iron bound bucket, the old moss covered bucket that hangs from the well, or from the cold spring gushing from the hill side. Money was not so plentiful but taxes were low, expenses light. I remember cotton selling for four cents per pound. It was ginned on a horse pulled gin. Once in my memory it could not be sold at all. Corn was 25c per bushel, peas 30c per bushel. In my own home all the blankets on the beds were woven on hand loom. Every one had a spinning wheel. The hose for the entire family were knit by mother. Women carried their sewing and knitting with them when visiting. Paper lighters were used to start fires to conserve matches. Many hand-made ornaments adorned the house. The smoke house was filled with meat and lard. Everyone, even the tenant negroes had a good orchard and plenty of chickens, hogs and cows. Schools were small and few. There were no beauty parlors, few cosmetics. Stealing was not nearly so prevalent and more people regarded their oath than now. Candles were used for light. Some used pine knots. Everyone had candle moulds. Many candles were made from beef fat. Everyone had good cattle and hogs. Every home had a medicine chest which held calomel, quinine, snake doctor and Simmons liver regulator. All soap was made at home, many a pot of soap have I stirred as a boy. Many people planted wheat for flour. People visited over the week-ends enjoying each others company. There was plenty of game in the woods. Deer, turkeys, squirrels, rabbits and quail abounded. The foxes were not near so great a nuisance. The streams abounded in fish. The young people enjoyed dancing, games and picnics. The dances were old fashion square dances, such as you may now hear on your radio barn dance program. Girls were not encouraged to accept the company of young men who drank nor did the decent boys drink if going with a girl. People slept soundly for their homes were unmortgaged. Most people had good saddle horses and buggies. The hauling was done in ox wagons. It was a day's job to drive to town from my home eight miles in muddy weather or winter time. Now the round trip is made in twenty-five or thirty minutes. Those living further from town than I made camps along the roadside staying over-night. Many people (my own people did) had fine libraries but with the majority the Bible, hymn bood and almanac were about all the literature to be found or cared for. Sometime when coffee was high, some of the poorer people mixed it with parched corn, sorghum seed or okra seed to make it go farther. I could enumerate indefinitely the changes from then till now. That which is today you know as to the increase of happiness brought on by gadgets—draw your own conclusions.

You see the changes have been swift and revolutionary. What wonderful joys and sorrows await the young babe 1938, who is coming in one door none can say. Only hope for the best. The old man with the scythe girds up his loins and looks down the weary way before—TIME MARCHES ON!

National Hygiene Day to Be Held On February 2, 1938

Volunteer Groups All Over The State Enlisted In The Campaign

Anticipating National Social Hygiene Day, February 2, Dr. Felix J. Underwood, executive officer of the state board of health, is enlisting the support of official and voluntary groups all over the state in the campaign against syphilis and gonorrhea.

"Stamp Out Syphilis—Enemy of Youth" is the slogan for National Social Hygiene Day. "More than half of the new venereal infections occur in the younger age groups," Dr. Underwood stated. "and it is obvious that effective preventive measures require the thorough education of young people as to the dangers of these diseases, their widespread prevalence, and the importance of early diagnosis and thorough treatment by a physician. The Mississippi Social Hygiene Association, organized this fall, is proving an invaluable aid in the fight against these diseases," Dr. Underwood declared.

Surgeon General Paran has announced that the fight against syphilis is a major purpose of his administration. The people of the United States are awakening to the widespred ill health, suffering, and economic waste that follow in the train of syphilis, "the great imitator."

The Association's National Anti-Syphilis Committee is under the chairmanship of General John J. Pershing, who has emerged from the retired seclusion of years to command this battle against the formidable enemy, syphilis.

Save Birds By Feeding Early Says Fred Jordan

Winter Emergency Stations Should Be Started While Weather Is Mild

New York, Dec. 29 — Winter feeding of birds should begin before bad weather comes, says Fred Jordan, director of National Wildlife Restoration Week.

"As soon as the hunting season closes, feeding stations should be established in all parts of the country where severe storms are likely to endanger bird life," said Mr. Jordan. "The Audubon Societies, 4-H clubs and sportsmen's clubs are actively interesting themselves in winter-feeding, with the result that tens of thousands of game birds and other valuable species are saved from starvation when snow and ice cut off their natural sources of food.

"There are a few simple rules to be observed in connection with feeding stations. First, they should be close to thick cover in which birds can find refuge from their enemies. The stations should be sheltered so that drifting snow or sleet will not cover the food. Game birds should not be fed on ground used by domestic fowls.

"Grit, as well as grain should be provided for game birds. Automatic poultry feeders in which grain and grit are mixed are very effective. A good substitute is an onion sack, hung so that birds can peck the food mixture through the meshes of the bag. Ears of corn, stuck on nails, make a good bird serveself.

"Birds should learn the location of feeding stations and get accustomed to visiting them in good weather so that when a storm occurs they will know where to go.

Tenant Purchase For Grenada County Committee Named

Three Farmers Named To Advise With Local FSA Supervisor

Secretary of Agriculture Henry A. Wallace this week named three farmers in each of the 28 counties in Mississippi recently designated for tenant farm purchase loans under provisions of the Bankhead-Jones Act to serve on county advisory committees to assist in the administration of the program.

The appointees for this county are:

F. E. Gillon, Rt. 1, Grenada, Chairman; A. W. Mullen, Holcomb, T. W. Goodwin, Hardy, W. E. Strider, Grenada.

The committee to be known as the county tenant purchase advisory committee, will advise with Farm Security Administration county supervisor W. E. Strider in selecting applicants from among the tenant farmers who apply, passing on farms tendered for purchase and similar details in connection with the program. Their appointments are for one year, ending December 31, 1938.

Farm Security Administration officials have announced that between five and ten loans will be made in this county during the current fiscal year to enable particularly worthy farm tenants to purchase small farms and make essential improvements.

Supervisor W. E. Strider who has been assigned administrative responsibility for carrying out the program in this county, is now accepting applications for purchase loans from eligible tenant farmers in this county.

Eager To Go Into Action For New National Foundation

Federal, State, County and City Health Officers, "G-Men" To Fight

New York, Dec. 28—Special to The Sentinel—Federal, State, County and City health officers, "G Men" of the medical world, are eager to go into action behind the new national Foundation to fight that crippling, maiming killer—Infantile Paralysis.

In every state in the Union these doctors who guard the public health have swung to the support of the "Fight Infantile Paralysis" campaign, Keith Morgan, Chairman of the committee for the celebration of the President's Birthday, declared today.

Headed by Dr. Thomas Parran, Surgeon General of the United States, over 400 of these health officers have joined the Medical Council in connection with the campaign.

They are from the ranks of the practicing physicians who President Roosevelt called "The front line fighters of this sickness."

Speaking for the U. S. Public Health Service, Dr. Parran declared:

"The Problem of Infantile Paralysis is a problem concerning every far-reaching citizen; the plan to use the celebration of the President's birthday for the purpose of raising funds to support this foundation puts the key for its solution directly in the hands of the entire country at large.

"There should be no hesitancy in the matter of response, for there can logically be no reason for any such hesitancy."

Mississippi ranks well on the list, Chairman Morgan said.

The campaign this year is centered behind the new Foundation. People everywhere will be asked not only to join the new Foundation but also to attend the celebrations on Saturday, January 29, in honor of President Roosevelt's birthday. All of the funds derived from these celebrations will go to the Foundation.

"Speaking of the Foundation, as created by the President, Chairman Morgan said:

"These health officers realize the importance of making a united fight against the disease. They know that infantile paralysis cannot be conquered by haphazard methods.

"In the World War each city did not fight independently. They were joined in a united effort. Now at last all cities are to unite in this war.

"The grim terror—infantile paralysis—every year in some town, some county, some state produces fear, panic, death and hu-

26 Violators Fined From $10 to $25

Jackson, Miss., Dec. 23—Fines ranging from $10 to $25 were paid this week by 26 violators of State Game and Fish Commission laws, according to Director Si Corley.

Five of the 12 persons arrested for hunting without having their guns plugged to three shots paid fines of $25 each.

Director Corley reported 12 violations for failure to procure licenses, fines ranging from $10 upward while licenses would have cost $1.25 for county and $3.25 for statewide.

Two prosecutions were for hunting out of season.

The list of prosecutions have been gradually decreasing since the enforcement drive started several weeks ago by the commission.

1938 To Be Another Year of Active Home - Building

About 65,000 Families Will Be Accomodated During 1938 in Building Homes

1938 will be another year of active home-building. C. F. Bernard, New Orleans manager of the Home Owners' Catalogs division of F. W. Dodge Corporation look to the new year for a construction volume of more than 475 million dollars in homes to be occupied by the owners.

"The housing needs of about 65,000 families will be accomodated during 1938 in the homes they will build for themselves," Mr. Bernard comments. "The continuation of this year's interest in home owning clearly shows the healthy trend of The Great American Family toward better homes for better living."

In a grouping of all types of family dwelling units, the Dodge corporation estimates that approximately 210,000 will be built during 1938. This includes apartments, two family houses, developments, houses for owners' occupancy and those built for sale or rent. All of this work will cost more than a billion dollars.

Families planning to build their own homes, in this vicinity, may obtain personal copies of HOME OWNERS' CATALOGS, a guide to the selection of home building materials, equipment and furnishings, without cost or any other obligations. This book is not offered for sale and the publishers restrict distribution to the families who need it most, at this time. It is available to all those who will build homes within twelve months, for their own occupancy, east of the Rockies, at costs of more than $4,000 exclusive of land. Readers of The Sentinel who qualify can secure their copies by writing to the publishers, F. W. Dodge Corporation, New Orleans, La., giving such information about their new homes as location, cost, short description and architects's name. The books will be sent postage paid.

New Hope, Brighter Opportunity, Come With Dawning Year

Abundant Food and Feed, More Livestock, Mean Prosperity on Farms of State

A more prosperous and more secure agriculture, based upon farming principles that are sound and sensible, is the New Year wish of J. C. Holton, commissioner of agriculture, in suggesting that plans be made now to cope with new conditions likely to obtain during 1938.

Referring to abundant production throughout agriculture during the old year, the farm commissioner cites three new high records established in Mississippi—the largest annual crop of cotton, the highest average yield of lint per acre, and the largest pecan crop of record. Yields of hay and grain crops all approached record proportions, he stated, and the income from livestock was increased for the fifth successive year.

"All told, Mississippi farmers harvested during 1937 probably the best crop in history. Abundant crops are noted throughout American agriculture, however, and the old problem of overproduction is with us again to beat down price. A new and more stringent agricultural law is in prospect, and while its details may be determined only after conferences between committees of the upper and lower houses of Congress, it seems assured that there will be a drastic downward revision of cotton acreage. It is to be hoped that such acreage may be fairly and equitably allocated to cotton producers. A total acreage of considerably less than 30 million acres seems assured, however, and producers will be confronted with the problem of so arranging their farming operations that farm income may nevertheless be increased.

"Money crops other than cotton may be profitably grown in Mississippi. More livestock is needed on state farms, and livestock will prove to be profitable market outlets for feed crops. The work of soil conservation needs to go on More frequent pay-days which can come only through a greater variety of marketed products, would

The Mississippi National Guard

Jackson, Miss., Dec. 30—The Mississippi National Guard, 2320 strong, has been trained by Mississippi officers under the supervision of Regular Army officers the extent that the numerous units in the state form the highly important component of the defense of the nation.

This training also has a direct bearing on the comfort and safety of the citizens of the state as is attested by the peace activities and humanitarian deeds of the citizen-soldiery in the past.

Notwithstanding this dual role of the citizen-soldiery, comparatively few Mississippians in public or private life are acquainted with the every-day life and activity of the Mississippi National Guard.

So thoroughly trained are the state's soldiers and so high are the ideals of the personnel, scant notice is taken of their efforts towards diminishing suffering and property losses in disasters—such as floods, tornadoes, fires and other tragedies with which the human race is afflicted.

The United States never has been a "military nation" and was founded and has grown mighty under the democratic form of citizen-soldiery for the defense of the country. The country is not and never has been a "professional army" nation.

Under our scheme of national defense and internal order, we have three organizations, two of which are exclusively citizens' organizations—the Regular Army with less than 165,000 officers and men, some 195,000 of the National Guard and then the Organized Reserves of citizen-soldiers.

The Regular Army is scattered all over the continental United States, in small units, but maintains powerful forces in Panama and Hawaii, while the National Guard is a highly trained force in every one of the states, the District of Columbia and some of our territorial possessions.

In this scheme of national defense, the National Guard is our first line of defense in continental United States. That is one of the reasons why the Federal government foots the bill in buying material, in paying for armory drills and in giving two weeks annual field training to the state troops.

Every constitution, from that of the United States on down to Arizona and New Mexico, the two states latest to be admitted to statehood, place the defense of the nation with the militia.

The Regular Army, the National Guard and the Organized Reserves are nothing more than an organized militia. They call the Regular Army, the National Guard and the Organized Reserves simply for better identification. But the personnel is dependent upon the originally founded principles in our Constitution of a militia.

And certainly when independence was formed and on down the years when the states were being admitted into the union, the provisions for a militia for defense there was no thought of constant war. The organizers of the nation and of the states were merely thoughtful enough to lay the ground work for preparedness—in time of invasion or to cope with internal disaster.

The Mississippi National Guard is a part of the 31st, or Dixie, Division, having been assigned a part of the 31st Division Headquarters, a part of the 61st Brigade Headquarters, the 155th Infantry, a part of the 56th Field Artillery Brigade Headquarters, the 114th Field Artillery, Regimental Headquarters and the First Battalion of the 106th Engineers, and a part of the 106th Quartermaster Regiment.

Control of the Mississippi National Guard is under the command of Governor Hugh White, as commander-in-chief just like the president of the United States is commander-in-chief of the regular military forces, keeping the control of the armed forces in the hands of the civilian elected by the people.

Brigadier General John A. O'Keefe, as Adjutant General of the state, was named to that office by the governor and is the chief of staff designated by the governor to direct the state's citizen-soldiery. Colonel George E. Hogaboom of Vicksburg commands the infantry troops, Colonel Harry Hulen of Jackson is in command of the engineers, Colonel A. G. Paxton of Greenville commands the artillery regiment and Lieutenant Colonel A. T. Callicott of Senatobia is in command of the quartermaster troops.

These units of the state soldiers are scattered in many communities in all sections of the state, and many more communities are eager to get units in their communities, but the number of units in the state is limited to those allotted to the state by the War Department. The possession of such a unit is a distinct advantage to every community.

Armory has the 61st Brigade Headquarters Company, the 155th Infantry regiment is located in Vicksburg, Jackson, Yazoo City, Clinton, Natchez, Meadville, Canton, Louisville, Cleveland, Clarksdale, Aberdeen, Corinth, Laurel, McComb, Tylertown Gulfport, and has officer personnel in Duncan and Summit, besides.

The 106th Engineer has units in Jackson, Drew, Moorhed, Vicksburg, and West Point, and the 114th Field Artillery is located in Greenville, Columbus, Jackson, Greenwood, Meridian, Unicersity of Mississippi, Grenada, Lexington, Starkville, Tupelo, Decatur, Hattiesburg, and Biloxi.

The 106th Quartermaster Regiment is located at Senatobia, Ocean Springs and Biloxi and the State Staff and State Detachment, Divisional Headquarters, and other units have personnel in Kosciusko, and some in the communities already named.

In most of these communities the National Guard maintains armories, some of them being civic centers. There is a need for improved armories in a dozen or more of these communities, and the communities will not gain the utmost benefits from having the citizen-soldiery until civic pride causes the erection of armories.

FORWARD!

It should be with few regrets that we see 1937 steal away into oblivion. When first he arrived, he was a husky, rosy-cheeked youngster with prospects galore ahead of him. But instead of encouraging his normal, steady growth into stalwart manhood and then comfortable old age, we decided to experiment.

We gave him shots in the arm to stimulate his growth so that he was middle-aged long before he was six months old. We hobbled him with strikes. We trained him on fear and uncertainty and name calling. So naturally he soon became a weak, querulous, quibbling old wreck long before his time.

Now young, husky, 1938 arrives! His coming couldn't be better timed. He finds us sorry for our sins and anxious to help him be the kind of a year he should be. He won't be any guinea pig. We've done our experimenting. And now we're ready to raise him in sane and sensible fashion.

So long, 1937; we're not too sorry to see you leave! Hi, 1938! Come on, let's march ahead!

IMMEDIATE RATE INCREASE VITAL

The railroads of the United States are today confronted with a situation so critical that an immediate increase in freight rates and passenger fares is essential. That is the gist of an unprecedented motion filed by the carriers before the Interstate Commerce Commission in the course of the hearings for rate increases now being held in Washington.

The situation is such, according to the motion, that, in spite of the action of the Commission in expediting the rate hearing, it will be impossible for many lines to continue their present high character transportation service to the public unless relief is obtained through increased revenues immediately. Since the original petition asking rate increases was filed with the Commission a short time ago, traffic carried by the lines has declined with unprecedented rapidity. While complete figures for November are not available, abundant evidence indicates that the operating experience in that month was extremely unsatisfactory—a number of lines were even unable to earn fixed charges. The credit problem is not improving. And high operating costs remain. This situation was recognized recently by President Roosevelt when he said, at a press conference, that the ICC should act quickly to preserve the lines' solvency.

If the railroads are permitted to put rate increases into immediate effect (increases which could be reduced or eliminated if the ICC found them unjustified when the hearing is concluded) the lines could meet their immediate obligations. Bankruptcies that are inevitable under present conditions would be prevented. And expenditures for bettering and replacing plant and equipment would be made.

The railroad problem today is almost incredibly grave. The present recession has fallen upon the lines at a time when they were economically in the worst possible position to meet it. Granting of early rate increases seems not only justified by the facts—but definitely in the interest of the public as well.

CONTROLLING DANGEROUS FORCES

As Albert W. Whitney of the National Conservation Bureau and the National Safety Council, points out, civilization is constantly introducing new hazards into life such as steam, electricity, explosives, poisons, locomotives and airplanes. Gradually, as our knowledge increases, we learn how to use such new forces and devices so that they may perform the utmost in public service with a minimum of risk.

The automobile is in the same catagory. And it can be dealt with in the same manner as other dangerous forces whose menaces have been eliminated or greatly subdued, and whose contributions to better living and working conditions have been correspondingly increased.

Education is the essential thing. And it must not be hit-and-miss education . It must represent a permanent, planned program, administered by experts.

So far as the traffic problem is involved, it is difficult to educate the adult. But the adults of tomorrow can be taught to use our streets and highways carefully and properly. Amazing progress has been made in expanding safety education and training in school curriculums. Students are not only taught the rudiments of safe driving, but what is equally important, the rudiments of safe walking. The result is found in the statistics—a steady decline in traffic fatalities to children of school age, even though fatalities to adults greatly increased during the same years.

The school which does not teach safety, shirks its responsibility to the children in its care, and to the community at large. Comparatively little expense is required to adopt and carry on a safety course—and the saving, measured in dollars as well as in the more important coin of lives, is incalculably greater.

Children In Court

(By Judge Malcolm Hatfield)

Many judges are wondering how thousands of insane and feeble-minded individuals, who are now running the streets, will react to the type of material that is now being published by a certain magazine.

Judges and police cannot cope with the type of magazine now sold on news stands which actually carried the shocking pictures and related in graphic detail all of the lurid facts concerning a woman who was ravaged and murdered.

Has the worship of the almighty dollar gone to such extremes in the United States that innocent girls are to be subjected at all times to the attacks of crazed morons whose imaginations are inflamed by the money mad editors of magazines who photograph such unwholesome incidents? Is this condition to go unchallenged in our New Year's resolutions?

Mississippi Farm News

Mississippi farmers are now planning their farming programs for the new year. Sound planning calls for production of plenty of food for the family, adequate feed for all livestock, improvement of soil fertility, and production of two or more cash crops. On many farms plans should be made to add cash income from sales of livestock and livestock products to the returns from crops.

man wreckage. They are the four horsemen of an American Apocalypse we are sworn to conquer."

The four fronts of immediate action of the Foundation are:

1—Scientific Research.
2—Epidemic First Aid.
3—Proper Care—Disseminating to doctors and parents present and new knowledge of the proper care which may prevent sad after-effects, such as crooked backs, curvature of the spine, twisted bodies, contracted limbs.
4—Dollars to Orthopedic Centers, Hospitals, Clinics for combating human wreckage.

Every town and county is vitally interested in every one of these fronts, Chairman Morgan said, adding:

"Quick aid in time of epidemics is especially important, so is proper care to prevent the crooked bodies, dropped shoulders, contracted hands, arms, legs and feet which frequently are the result of inadequate medical attention.

"The new Foundation will be like a gaint net reaching into every community. This is the compelling need."

Endorsements of the campaign from health officials of Mississippi include:

Dr. John Howell, of Canton, health officer of Madison county:

"I wish to be numbered among those who endorse the idea and to take a part in the fight against the disease and accept your invitation to become a member of the Medical Council."

Dr. D. A. Ratliff, of Columbia, health officer of Marion county:

"I appreciate the honor of serving as a member of your Medical Council in this worthy cause and if I can be of any help in this matter it will give me great pleasure to serve."

Dr. C. E. Lehmberg, of Columbus, health officer of Lowndes county:

"I shall be glad to serve as a member of the Medical Council."

Dr. B. D. Blackwelder, of Hattiesburg, Director, Forrest County Health Department:

"I will be happy to accept a membership on the Medical Council."

Dr. W. E. Noblin, of Jackson, health officer of the City of Jackson and Hinds county:

a bank's closing than they did in the years before it was known."

He recalled that 16,800 banks closed between 1921 and 1933, their collapse wiping out $3,000,000,000 in deposits which were never recovered. The chairman continued:

"Closing of those banks and the loss of that money carried misfortune and hardship into nearly all communities in the country. How much disaster would have been averted had deposit insurance existed is a matter of speculation.

"We do know, however, that depositors' recoveries would have been much greater. We also know that had the Federal Deposit Insurance Corporation been in existence and covering any sizeable percentage of those institutions that many of them would have remained open.

"The Corporation not only pays off depositors in closed insured banks but makes loans, wherever conditions warrant, to banking institutions that are in financial difficulty but may be rehabilitated. Thus the Corporation prevents their destruction and the resulting business unsettlement in the communities they serve."

contribute as much as any other one thing to farm security.

"The New Year period is commonly accepted as a time for balancing the records of the old year and making plans for the new. May it be such this year. Mississippi is a great agricultural state, having all the essential requirements for an agricultural order exceeded nowhere. To properly utilize these almost limitless resources is to bring into effect an area of permanent and unparalleled prosperity."

Henry Giles, colored, age 53, underwent a major operation in the Illinois Central Chicago Hospital Saturday, December 18th and died December 23rd, his remains arriving in Grenada Sunday, December 26th. Funeral held Monday, the 27th.

Henry had been Illinois Central janitor at Grenada for the past twelve years of his thirty-two years of continuous faithful service to that road, and he was held in high esteem by his superior officers.

Besides his wife, Hattie, he leaves one son, Henry, Jr., age 11 and one brother and two sisters.

Today's Taxogram

The family with an average income of $150 per month pays on the average of $19.10 each month to the tax collector—not in direct taxation, but by the indirect, or "hidden" tax route, a study by the Northwestern National Life Insurance Company shows. For instance, the food bill for such a family averages $43.50 per month, the study revealed. Of that amount, $3.09 represented taxes hidden by the cost of the articles purchased. The same family pays on the average of $30 per month for rent, and of this amount $7.59 goes, in some way or other, to the tax bill.

RAT CONTROL PLANNED

State College, Miss., Dec. 30—A serious outbreak of rats may occur during the coming winter due to both abundant food supply and the tendency of people to economize in rat poison and traps, according to Robert B. Dean, of the U. S. Biological Survey. He states that increased numbers of rats have already been noticed in many localities, and it is feared that damage and the spread of disease by rats may be greater this winter than in recent years. The removing of rat harbors and the rat proofing of premises, particularly corn cribs and food storage houses, are advocated by the Rodent Control office and preparations for rat poisoning campaigns for the next few months are being made.

Rat poisoning campaigns have been conducted in Mississippi during the past two months at Edwards, Shubuta, Bigbee Valley, Macon, Soso, Blue Mountain College and Pascagoula. Other campaigns in Mississippi are planned in the near future for Tupelo, Paulette, Brooksville, Lawrence and Meridian. The time most suitable for this work is from October through the winter to May.

Rat poisoning campaigns are conducted under a cooperative arrangement whereby the town or other cooperating agency purchases the bait materials through local dealers, and the State Plant Board cooperating with the U. S. Biological Survey furnishes supervision of the work without cost. Cities, towns and rural communities interested in getting a campaign should confer with their local Plant Board Inspector or write to Robert B. Dean, U. S. Biological Survey, State College, Miss.
